Partners:

Advances in technology have enabled large companies to build resilience in their supply chains by integrating much more closely with their suppliers. This same technology is now leveling the playing field for smaller shippers and manufacturers – also helping companies overcome threats that can disrupt the flow of goods and service.

Join our panel of leading experts from business and academia as they discuss how to build resilience in the supply chain by providing ways to effectively identify, address and reduce disruptions, such as natural disasters, extreme weather and cybercrimes.

- Processes that focus on risk assessment and risk management
- Effective use of data
- Technology enabling real-time decision making

Guest Speakers:

Louis Biron, Chief Operations Officer, One Horn Transportation

William McLaury, Rutgers University Professor and Former Global Head of Supply Chain Strategy, Novartis Pharmaceuticals

Angel Ortiz, Senior Director, Supply Chain Risk Management, Johnson & Johnson

Gregory Schlegel, Founder, The Supply Chain Risk Management Consortium, Adjunct Professor Supply Chain Risk, Lehigh University, VP SherTrack LLC, NJ

Moderator:

Jeffrey Cascini, Managing Director, Supply Chain Consulting, WeiserMazars
